

Haiku Yellow's Guide to Seasons

Haiku is a traditional Japanese form of poetry that consists of three unrhymed lines of five, seven, and five syllables. Haiku often focus on nature and the seasons, and they often use vivid imagery to capture a moment in time.

The seasons are a recurring theme in haiku, as they provide a natural framework for observing the changes in the natural world. Each season has its own unique characteristics, which can be captured in haiku.

Spring

Spring is a time of new beginnings and growth. The days are getting longer, the flowers are blooming, and the animals are waking up from their winter sleep.

Here are some examples of haiku about spring:

- Spring is in the air

- The flowers are blooming
- The birds are singing

Summer

Summer is a time of warmth and abundance. The days are long and hot, and the sun is shining brightly.

Here are some examples of haiku about summer:

- Summer is here at last
- The sun is shining bright
- The birds are singing

Autumn

Autumn is a time of change and decay. The days are getting shorter, the leaves are turning brown, and the animals are preparing for winter.

Here are some examples of haiku about autumn:

- Autumn leaves are falling
- The days are getting shorter
- The nights are getting colder

Winter

Winter is a time of rest and reflection. The days are short and cold, and the snow is often falling.

Here are some examples of haiku about winter:

- Winter is here at last
- The snow is falling down
- The world is quiet

Haiku is a beautiful and expressive form of poetry that can be used to capture the changing seasons. By using vivid imagery and simple language, haiku poets can create poems that are both timeless and evocative.
