Historical Origins

The roots of the Seer can be traced back to the medieval period. In the 15th century, the Italian Renaissance artist, Francesco del Cossa, depicted the figure as part of a series of Tarot cards. The card, initially known as "The Prophet," portrayed a jester-like character with a lunar crest on his head, embodying the idea of a seer with access to hidden knowledge.

Esoteric Symbolism

Within the esoteric traditions, the Red Harlequin represents the Mercurial archetype, known for its transformative and alchemical properties. The red color symbolizes passion and vitality, while the white diamonds signify purity and illumination. The staff held by the Seer, often adorned with a crescent moon, represents the receptive and intuitive nature of the archetype.

The surrounding symbols of the zodiac and alchemy further enhance the Seer's connection to the cosmic and earthly realms. The zodiac signs represent the cyclical nature of time and the influence of celestial bodies on human affairs. The alchemical symbols, such as the sun, moon, and philosopher's stone, allude to the transformative process of self-discovery and spiritual enlightenment.
